(By United Press)
Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 21.—A widespread plot to overthrow the government has been discovered and the leaders arrested, it was announced officially today.

Widespread arrests have been made in connection with the seditious movement, designed to overturn the established authorities, said the official statement.

The plot had been so fully worked out that even cabinet posts in the proposed regime had been distributed.

"The government has had knowledge for some time," the statement said, "of the criminal intentions of the plotters and awaited only the proper time for repressive action."

"When full proof was obtained the government agents succeeded in surprising the malcontents who evidently had planned their outbreak for today."

"The leaders were arrested at a meeting here where preparations were being completed for the uprising and compelled to reveal all their plans with the names of persons participating and those who had knowledge of the affair."

CLASH BETWEEN THE OLD AND NEW, SAYS TRIBUNE

SAYS ASSOCIATED PRESS SEEKS TO PREVENT RADIO SEND-ING OF NEWS

OLD RULING DOES NOT TAKE IN-TO ACCOUNT NEW ELEMENT OF MODERN LIFE

(By United Press)
Chicago, Oct. 22.—The Chicago Tribune today announced it would test the validity of the Associated Press rule prohibiting member newspapers from broadcasting election returns and other matter furnished by the news agency or collected from territory to "which the Associated Press exclusively is entitled."

It is a clash between the old and the new, the Tribune declared. The following excerpts of the Associated Press notice just received by the Tribune is the nub of the situation:

"You are requested to co-operate in enforcement of the established rules against the display of bulletins and prevent utilization of radio for broadcasting Associated Press returns from your territory, to which the Associated Press exclusively is entitled."

"By this means the Associated Press seeks to prevent radio dissemination of news by important newspapers—in this case the results of the national election—into the homes of the people. The Tribune will test the validity of this ruling." The Tribune declared in part.

The issue of the ruling is in effect a clash between the old and the new. The ruling seems not to take into account the new element of modern life which has enabled leaders in politics and other lines of activity to speak directly to millions during the present campaign. It would forbid broadcasting of any Cook county election results by the Tribune, for example, no matter if gathered by the paper's own reporters.

"This ruling appears to take on the aspect of a monopolistic control. It is of no definite advantage to the Tribune to circulate important news by radio on the night before its morning edition appears with the identical news. Perhaps it would seem more canny to preserve in darkness the news that Coolidge has been elected from the public until revealed in the issue published and put on the news stands the morning after."

"But this is the era of radio. The Tribune has established a broadcasting program—at considerable expense and no tangible compensatory returns. People have installed radios in their homes. They listen to public addresses and want to get quick announcement of election results."

"Accordingly, before yielding to the ruling of the Associated Press this newspaper proposed to consult lawyers and seek a ruling in the courts—even to the highest court—on the question of the rights of a news gathering organization to monopolize news and prevent its dissemination by means of radio. The Tribune concluded with the statement that four years ago it furnished election night bulletins to people gathered in Chicago homes and this year plans to reach infinitely more people by broadcasting the results of polling on November 4."

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 22.—The St. Louis Post-Dispatch, member of the Associated Press, will broadcast election returns over its radio station, KSD here on election night, officials of the paper said today.

Barnesville, Minn., Oct. 22.—The tender nerves of a "parents' pet" was blamed today by H. T. Upsahl, science teacher at the high school, for charges that he used an "electric chair" to punish pupils.

Upsahl was arrested on a charge of assault after he had placed Earl Tenneson, a 14-year-old student, in the chair and given him a shock. Two other refractory boys were given the same treatment, Upsahl told the United Press today, and several girls took the shock out of curiosity.

"We rigged up a common office chair to a Testa coil of very high frequency for experimental purposes," Upsahl said. "It is impossible to hurt anyone with high frequency. The boy was not injured in any way."

"When experiments were over I warned the boys that any disorder would result in treatment in the chair. The apparatus is the same as that used by physicians in the treatment of rheumatism. It is harmless."

Young Tenneson and two other boys were "out of order," he said, and went willingly to the chair to take their promised punishment.

"It was as much a matter of punishment as a scientific demonstration," he said. "Young Tenneson got sore and told his parents. He is known as a parents' pet. There is nothing to the charge that he was hurt."

Upsahl said he had never heard of a chair being used for punishment of pupils before. He came here from Texas two years ago and is 25 years old. At liberty on $2,000 bail he faces trial Saturday. The boy's father declared he has two wounds, one in the calf of each leg.

AIR DEFENSE CONTROL SOUGHT BY ARMY, NAVY

OTHERS SEEK SEPARATE AIR SYSTEM
BRANCH

MORE MONEY MAY BE SPENT ON AIR-CRAFT

By LUDWELL DENNY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
(By United Press)
Washington, Oct. 22.—Behind the controversy on "Aircraft versus Battleships," which has caused President Coolidge to order a naval investigation, there are deeper smoldering disputes over air defense which involve a three-cornered conflict between the Army and Navy and advocates of a separate air service, a high official told the United Press today.

Indications that the Administration, as a result of the successful round-the-world flight, looks with favor on a reallocation of defense appropriations in which more money will be spent on aircraft, has raised the question, "Which branch of the service—army or navy—is to be entrusted with the major portion of air defense?"

A joint army-navy investigation board will be appointed after the present navy investigators report, and will be charged with meeting this growing issue, which has so far been evaded.

Meanwhile Secretary of War Weeks has raised his request for the army air service appropriation to $23,000,000, an increase of about $10,000,000 over the present expenditure. None of the air service appropriation goes for salaries, the entire personnel being paid out of the general army budget. Practically the entire increase of $10,000,000 would be used for new equipment and planes, according to Weeks.

The Two Issues

The two issues which are to be threshed out in the near future are:

1. Shall the air coast defense system, which is to be built up, to be in the hands of the navy or army?
2. Or, shall the United States follow the example of Great Britain and establish an entirely separate department and service for air defense, ranking as an equal unit with the navy and army and as completely in charge of air preparedness as the other branches of the service are on sea and on land?

Taking up the latter issue first, as the more easily disposed of, officers of both the army and navy say they do not expect this government to consider seriously the British system. Great Britain has not found a separate air service practicable, they say, pointing out the growing British criticism of the three-army system of defense.

Most of the American advocates of a separate unit system are flying officers of the army and navy who say that so long as air defense is a secondary consideration as at present for the two services which are primarily interested in land or sea defense, air preparedness will come out at the little end of the horn.

The Army and Navy departments and staffs, they say, have neither the time, training nor incentive to "see things from the air" with their feet upon the ground or upon deck they are unable to keep abreast of the flying times, according to aviation officers. Many aviators, while ranking air defense as much more important in the future than either that on sea or land, maintain that even soldiers and sailors should admit that the three services are at least equally important, and therefore deserving of equal treatment.

Opponents of the three-unit plan are apparently a large majority and probably will be able to block any change. Their argument, based chiefly on the British example, is that the future importance of air defense is admitted by everyone, the only argument being as to how it can be effected most efficiently.

Unity in Command

"Unity of command won the World War," say the advocates of the present system. The Germans had the edge on the Allies because of a single command, they continue, and that handicap was not overcome until the Allied command centered in Foch. Defense depends upon co-ordination, and any step toward diversification, such as the establishment of a third unit would weaken defense, they contend.

It is difficult enough to co-ordinate the army and navy and keep them working together harmoniously, without adding another department, so the argument runs.

"Look at France," is the way one officer put it; "she has built up the greatest air force in the world, and without the separate unit system." When asked whether the French and American systems are the same, the officer replied, "Not exactly, and that's the rub."

Pretty Girls Active in St. Louis in Observance of War Heroes' National "Forget-Me-Not Day"

"While neither this country nor France has a separate air service, there is another part of her system which we should copy—her enlisted pilots. Our pilots are officers, that is, a very limited number. Not until we train enlisted men as pilots, turning them back into civil life every three years, can we create the reserve flying force necessary to national defense."

Changes along these suggested lines, to provide a larger number of reserve flyers and commercial aircraft factories which could turn out hundreds of fighting planes on short notice, are expected by persons close to the government.

Any change necessitating a separate air service is not looked for, however. With the Administration and the public bent on checking rather than increasing the total military budget, the fact that a separate air service would add heavily to mere administrative expense by duplicating departments and staffs is expected to kill the proposed plan.

HAVE KIDNEYS EXAMINED BY YOUR DOCTOR

Take Salts to Wash Kidneys if Back
Pains You or Bladder
Bothers

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

WILL TURN OUTFIELDER

WHEN Joe Bullet Leslie Bush, star pitcher of the New York Yankees, finds his pitching days are over, he will take up outfielding, following the illustrious example set by his friend, Babe Ruth. Bush is a good fielder. When he played on Brainerd sandlots he first shone in the outfield and it wasn't until an emergency existed that he was shoved into the box to save the game for his playmates.

Joe Bullet has a keen batting eye and is a hard hitter. Manager Huggins used him as a pinch hitter this season. In a Chicago game played late in the fall, Bush stepped in the breach and rapped a home run over the fence.

When he pitched for Missoula, Montana, his services as a batter and especially a pinch hitter were in as much demand as his pitching. We recall one time where Bush pitched and won a morning game and in the afternoon, when Missoula was going bad in the ninth inning, away in arrears as regards scores and the bases full, Bush hopped in and retired the side scoreless and when his turn came to bat, pounded out a home run, scoring three men ahead and won the game.

TAKE TURNS IN NAGGING

THE George Kopoun home in Chicago just cannot quit nagging and the situation came to the judicial observation of Judge Harry Lewis who, with the wisdom of a Solomon sitting in judgment, found as follows: To restore the family peace, Mrs. Kopoun is to do her nagging on Mondays, Wednesday and Fridays and let George do his rest of the week with the exception of Sunday, when both sides are to declare a halt and the truce flag should fly. By taking one day's rest, both sides can store up enough ammunition to start a fresh nagging attack next week.

If this nagging propensity was only turned to lucrative account, it would be of some value to the world. Take for instance, a bill collector. Give him the persistence and the resourcefulness of a full-time nagger, and he would collect every bill entrusted to his care.

If every nagger would turn his or her attention to some vote slacker, we guarantee the whole United States will be found at the polls November 4th.

CAVEMAN, A DUMB MATE

"THERE was no masterful caveman after all—he was a poor fish who did the best he could, and his wife or mate did the thinking for him," declares Mrs. G. C. McCurdy, who with her husband, also a scientist, discovered five human skulls, one being 3,000 years old.

The McCurdys are archaeologists attached to the Peabody museum, Yale university. Mr. McCurdy refused to be drawn into any controversy regarding his wife's deduction concerning the masterly ability of a cavewoman as being far superior to her cave husband.

The McCurdy observations, that is from the female side of the house, are not borne out in a serial running in "Liberty" magazine, adjunct of the Chicago Tribune, where all constructive ability and mental reasoning is accorded Mr. Caveman and but precious little to the cave ladies.

Mr. McCurdy said his wife was an associate archaeologist and as such was entitled to her opinions.

CHINESE WAR METHODS

CHINESE, engaged in civil war, follow a regular code. This is commented on by Miss Harriet Smith, a guest of the Young Women's Christian Association of New York, who has spent many years in China.

Commenting on China's method of warfare, Miss Smith said that if war must be going on, that it is made about as pleasant in China as one can hope for, the innate courtesy of the Chinese appearing in many of their strategies of war.

"To avoid too much bloodshed, fighting is usually done only at night, under cover of darkness. One road is always left open for the defeated army to take. Captives are rarely taken. The Chinese are invariably courteous and hospitable to foreigners."

A GREAT GAME NOVEMBER 15

NOVEMBER 15 a great game will be played at the University stadium when Zuppke brings his team to play Minnesota. Prominent in the Illinois lineup will be that wonder in football, Red Grange, halfback, who made football history last Saturday by four touchdowns in the first twelve minutes of play with Michigan.

We suppose Minnesota will have to build a defense directed against Red or he may win the game single-handed.

A DEBATE on "Capital Punishment" will be held in New York next Sunday afternoon, October 26, between Clarence S. Darrow, attorney who saved Leopold and Loeb from a hangman's noose, and Judge Alfred J. Talley. The latter is an able lawyer who has criticized the growing practice of judges in showing leniency to first degree murderers.

ALLEN T. BURNS, secretary of the National Information bureau, organization in New York city that acts as a clearing house for community chests in more than 200 American cities, says the time will come when people in the Northwest will settle their industrial and political disputes by the Community Chest method.

RED CROSS IS URGING BETTER-HEALTH BATTLE

Tireless in Services Advancing Cause of Freedom from Human Suffering.

Not alone in preparedness for emergencies, but in a tireless offensive battle for better health is the American Red Cross nurse maintaining in peace time the high tradition of her war service. As in war, the same self-effacing service for humanity goes on its quiet, effective way content in its accomplishments, seeking no public acclaim. Enrolled in the Red Cross Nursing Service are 40,636 of these missionaries of health, nearly 1,000 carrying the message of a finer public health to as many communities and 1,100 teaching large classes in home hygiene and care of the sick. Exactly 100 Red Cross nurses are still on duty overseas, helping the struggle forward toward the high standard of American nurse efficiency in many countries.

In the Government services 3,117 enrolled Red Cross nurses are on duty with the Army, Navy, Public Health Service and the Veterans Bureau, while the entire active enrollment is maintained as a reserve for the Army Nurse Corps and available to the Navy in a national defense emergency. Nine hundred nurses were added to the roll the last year.

Red Cross nursing, however, has perhaps its finest expression out in the places laid waste by fire, flood and storm, and in the back reaches far from the centers of population. In every disaster the Red Cross nurse is first called for, first to respond, and the last to leave her post of duty among the suffering victims. In the isolated sections of Alaska, North Carolina, Virginia, Idaho, and among the bleak islands of Penobscott Bay, Me., her ministrations are making hard lives easier and working for a brighter future for the children. Her part in the human drama of the time is increasingly important, although it is subdued by the very nature of her work.

The policy of the American Red Cross to establish under Chapter control public health nursing services in communities lacking such facilities has been justified and this pioneering work is everywhere endorsed by authorities who are quick to take it over as a proper municipal function and a duty of taxpayers. The Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick program has further penetrated into the schools as a definite part of curriculums. During the year 29,000 school pupils took this Red Cross course. Three telephone corporations adopted it and graduated 960 employee students.

As good health depends upon right eating the Red Cross Nutrition Service continued to promote individual and community health, particularly the health of mothers and children. This service reached nearly 150,000 persons during the year and found work to do for several thousand Red Cross volunteer workers.

Red Cross Fighting
First Aid Battle
To Conserve Life

Reliable records establish the fact that more than 75,000 accidental deaths occur every year in the United States. The records show that 205 American citizens are killed every day; that 38 of these deaths are due to automobiles, 35 to falls, 19 to drownings, 16 to burns.

Facing such distressing sacrifice of life is the First Aid Service of the American Red Cross, fighting through education and demonstration to instill a consciousness of safety in the public mind and teaching approved methods which assure that competent hands will care for injured persons until the arrival of doctors. Trained service in the first few minutes is vital in serious accidents and saves many precious lives.

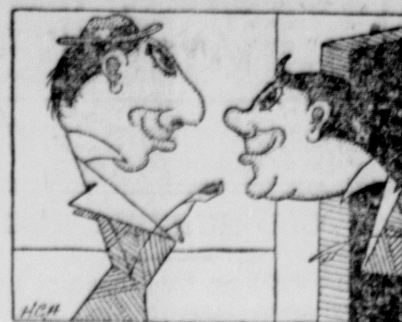

One of the most encouraging signs of the past year is the record of the Red Cross First Aid Insurance Car No. 1 which traveled 9,700 miles along junk lines, stopping at 137 places. The car's staff of surgeons gave 911 demonstrations to audiences composed of 42,150 railroad men, 71,000 high school and college students, 13,000 industrial workers, 2,000 members of clubs, and nearly 18,000 policemen, firemen, and other municipal employees, a total of 147,000.

Red Cross First Aid certificates were conferred upon 13,865 persons who took the course last year, an increase of 4,000 over 1923. Telephone, gas and electric companies, public service corporations and other large employers of the country adopted the Red Cross course, and their team contests everywhere were witnessed by huge crowds with as much interest as develops at popular athletic games.

In the industrial field the growth of First Aid practice to fight to reduce preventable accidents and unnecessary loss of life has received wide recognition. The promise of an unprecedented advance in this fine cause lies in the evidence of the great strides systematic instruction in First Aid has made throughout the country through the Red Cross Chapters and the work of the experts in this service under direction of the national organization.

Sign the American Red Cross roll this year for humanity's sake.

WILL TURN OUTFIELDER

WHEN Joe Bullet Leslie Bush, star pitcher of the New York Yankees, finds his pitching days are over, he will take up outfielding, following the illustrious example set by his friend, Babe Ruth. Bush is a good fielder. When he played on Brainerd sandlots he first shone in the outfield and it wasn't until an emergency existed that he was shoved into the box to save the game for his playmates.

Joe Bullet has a keen batting eye and is a hard hitter. Manager Huggins used him as a pinch hitter this season. In a Chicago game played late in the fall, Bush stepped in the breach and rapped a home run over the fence.

When he pitched for Missoula, Montana, his services as a batter and especially a pinch hitter were in as much demand as his pitching. We recall one time where Bush pitched and won a morning game and in the afternoon, when Missoula was going bad in the ninth inning, away in arrears as regards scores and the bases full, Bush hopped in and retired the side scoreless and when his turn came to bat, pounded out a home run, scoring three men ahead and won the game.

TAKE TURNS IN NAGGING

THE George Kopoun home in Chicago just cannot quit nagging and the situation came to the judicial observation of Judge Harry Lewis who, with the wisdom of a Solomon sitting in judgment, found as follows: To restore the family peace, Mrs. Kopoun is to do her nagging on Mondays, Wednesday and Fridays and let George do his rest of the week with the exception of Sunday, when both sides are to declare a halt and the truce flag should fly. By taking one day's rest, both sides can store up enough ammunition to start a fresh nagging attack next week.

If this nagging propensity was only turned to lucrative account, it would be of some value to the world. Take for instance, a bill collector. Give him the persistence and the resourcefulness of a full-time nagger, and he would collect every bill entrusted to his care.

If every nagger would turn his or her attention to some vote slacker, we guarantee the whole United States will be found at the polls November 4th.

CAVEMAN, A DUMB MATE

"THERE was no masterful caveman after all—he was a poor fish who did the best he could, and his wife or mate did the thinking for him," declares Mrs. G. C. McCurdy, who with her husband, also a scientist, discovered five human skulls, one being 3,000 years old.

The McCurdys are archaeologists attached to the Peabody museum, Yale university. Mr. McCurdy refused to be drawn into any controversy regarding his wife's deduction concerning the masterly ability of a cavewoman as being far superior to her cave husband.

The McCurdy observations, that is from the female side of the house, are not borne out in a serial running in "Liberty" magazine, adjunct of the Chicago Tribune, where all constructive ability and mental reasoning is accorded Mr. Caveman and but precious little to the cave ladies.

Mr. McCurdy said his wife was an associate archaeologist and as such was entitled to her opinions.

CHINESE WAR METHODS

CHINESE, engaged in civil war, follow a regular code. This is commented on by Miss Harriet Smith, a guest of the Young Women's Christian Association of New York, who has spent many years in China.

Commenting on China's method of warfare, Miss Smith said that if war must be going on, that it is made about as pleasant in China as one can hope for, the innate courtesy of the Chinese appearing in many of their strategies of war.

"To avoid too much bloodshed, fighting is usually done only at night, under cover of darkness. One road is always left open for the defeated army to take. Captives are rarely taken. The Chinese are invariably courteous and hospitable to foreigners."

A GREAT GAME NOVEMBER 15

NOVEMBER 15 a great game will be played at the University stadium when Zupke brings his team to play Minnesota. Prominent in the Illinois lineup will be that wonder in football, Red Grange, halfback, who made football history last Saturday by four touchdowns in the first twelve minutes of play with Michigan.

We suppose Minnesota will have to build a defense directed against Red or he may win the game single-handed.

A DEBATE on "Capital Punishment" will be held in New York next Sunday afternoon, October 26, between Clarence S. Darrow, attorney who saved Leopold and Loeb from a hangman's noose, and Judge Alfred J. Talley. The latter is an able lawyer who has criticized the growing practice of judges in showing leniency to first degree murderers.

ALLEN T. BURNS, secretary of the National Information bureau, organization in New York city that acts as a clearing house for community chests in more than 200 American cities, says the time will come when people in the Northwest will settle their industrial and political disputes by the Community Chest method.

WHEN a tong war of the Orientals reaches the hatchet stage, few wounded remain after an encounter. The hatchet men aim to split offending skulls.

SOME fierce denunciations of the slacker voter are being published. But, here's the rub, many such a slacker doesn't read the denunciations.

"PRODUCTIVE business cannot wait on politics," says Henry Ford most emphatically.

RED CROSS IS URGING BETTER-HEALTH BATTLE

Tireless in Services Advancing Cause of Freedom from Human Suffering.

Not alone in preparedness for emergencies, but in a tireless offensive battle for better health is the American Red Cross nurse maintaining in peace time the high tradition of her war service. As in war, the same self-effacing service for humanity goes on its quiet, effective way content in its accomplishments, seeking no public acclaim. Enrolled in the Red Cross Nursing Service are 40,635 of these missionaries of health, nearly 1,000 carrying the message of a finer public health to as many communities and 1,100 teaching large classes in home hygiene and care of the sick. Exactly 100 Red Cross nurses are still on duty overseas, helping the struggle forward toward the high standard of American nurse efficiency in many countries.

In the Government services 3,117 enrolled Red Cross nurses are on duty with the Army, Navy, Public Health Service and the Veterans Bureau, while the entire active enrollment is maintained as a reserve for the Army Nurse Corps and available to the Navy in a national defense emergency. Nine hundred nurses were added to the roll the last year.

Red Cross nursing, however, has perhaps its finest expression out in the places laid waste by fire, flood and storm, and in the back reaches far from the centers of population. In every disaster the Red Cross nurse is first called for, first to respond, and the last to leave her post of duty among the suffering victims. In the isolated sections of Alaska, North Carolina, Virginia, Idaho, and among the bleak islands of Penobscott Bay, Me., her ministrations are making hard lives easier and working for a brighter future for the children. Her part in the human drama of the time is increasingly important, although it is subdued by the very nature of her work.

The policy of the American Red Cross to establish under Chapter control public health nursing services in communities lacking such facilities has been justified and this pioneering work is everywhere endorsed by authorities who are quick to take it over as a proper municipal function and a duty of taxpayers. The Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick program has further penetrated into the schools as a definite part of curriculum. During the year 29,000 school pupils took this Red Cross course. Three telephone corporations adopted it and graduated 960 employe students.

As good health depends upon right eating the Red Cross Nutrition Service continued to promote individual and community health, particularly the health of mothers and children. This service reached nearly 150,000 persons during the year and found work to do for several thousand Red Cross volunteer workers.

Red Cross Fighting First Aid Battle To Conserve Life

Reliable records establish the fact that more than 75,000 accidental deaths occur every year in the United States. The records show that 206 American citizens are killed every day; that 38 of these deaths are due to automobiles, 35 to falls, 19 to drownings, 16 to burns.

Facing such distressing sacrifice of life is the First Aid Service of the American Red Cross, fighting through education and demonstration to instill a consciousness of safety in the public mind and teaching approved methods which assure that competent hands will care for injured persons until the arrival of doctors. Trained service in the first few minutes is vital in serious accidents and saves many precious lives.

One of the most encouraging signs of the past year is the record of the Red Cross First Aid Insurance Car No. 1 which traveled 9,700 miles along trunk lines, stopping at 137 places. The car's staff of surgeons gave 911 demonstrations to audiences composed of 42,150 railroad men, 71,000 high school and college students, 15,000 industrial workers, 2,000 members of clubs, and nearly 18,000 policemen, firemen, and other municipal employes, a total of 147,000.

Red Cross First Aid certificates were conferred upon 12,865 persons who took the course last year, an increase of 4,000 over 1923. Telephone, gas and electric companies, public service corporations and other large employers of the country adopted the Red Cross course, and their team contests everywhere were witnessed by huge crowds with as much interest as develops at popular athletic games.

In the industrial field the growth of First Aid practice to fight to reduce preventable accidents and unnecessary loss of life has received wide recognition. The promise of an unprecedented advance in this fine cause lies in the evidence of the great strides systematic instruction in First Aid has made throughout the country through the Red Cross Chapters and the work of the experts in this service under direction of the national organization.

Sign the American Red Cross roll this year for humanity's sake.

DAVIS GAINS ON COOLIDGE IN DIGEST POLL

LEADS IN ELEVEN STATES

THAN COMBINED VOTE OF OTHER CANDIDATES

John W. Davis has increased his percentage of the popular and Electoral College vote in this week's returns of The Literary Digest's big Presidential poll as ballots from all of the forty-eight States have been received which, The Digest proclaims, "may, for the first time, be considered fairly representative of the nation as a whole."

As the Democratic percentage has risen slightly, the Republican ratio has correspondingly decreased. Of the total of nearly 2,000,000 votes, Coolidge has 1,066,214; Davis, 384,295; La Follette, 432,660, which expressed in percentages show 56 per cent Republican, 20 per cent Democratic, and almost 23 per cent Progressive.

La Follette is still holding Wisconsin while Davis has increased his leadership to eleven States and President Coolidge is ahead in the other thirty-six States. La Follette is second choice in twenty-eight States with Davis second in thirteen. In Kentucky and Oklahoma, the Democratic candidate is crowding the Republican standard-bearer closely and La Follette has gained slightly on the President in California in the week's tabulations.

"The Democratic percentage may be expected to rise still further with succeeding returns," The Digest predicts, "since the States in which Democratic strength is confessedly strongest are among the last ones to report."

"Many Democratic spokesmen, notably Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, have explained that the Democratic campaign is slow in getting under way, by comparison with the campaigns of Mr. Coolidge and Mr. La Follette, and therefore, it may be considered to the advantage of the Democrats that their strongholds are being heard from comparatively late in the poll."

"This fact may compensate for any advantage given the Republicans by the strong Coolidge showing in the States from which returns were first received."

"Both Democratic and Progressive publicists have argued that The Digest's polls tend to favor Republican candidates by approximately 10 per cent, and several editors produce figures from previous polls to back up their arguments. This alleged percentage of error, of course, may or may not exist, but it is noteworthy that, even granting its existence, it would make a change in the political complexion of only three States."

"California would be transferred from the Coolidge to the La Follette column, Kentucky and Oklahoma would go to the Democrats, and West Virginia, Mr. Davis home State, would show practically a tie vote between Coolidge and Davis."

"A feature of the voting in California is that, since the tabulation published a week ago, Coolidge has received 5,149 to La Follette's 4,651, a proportion which seems to indicate a slight rise, for the week at least, in the California popularity of the Progressive candidate."

"The question as to the source of Mr. La Follette's strength, whether drawn more largely from the Republican or Democratic ranks, continues to stir a good many of the political prophets and dopesters."

"In consulting the table, of 'How the Same Voters Voted in 1920,' some observers of the poll have called attention to the large size of the 'Did-Not-Vote' column. In this column, it must be explained, is included both those who specify that they did not vote and those who fail to mention their political allegiance in 1920."

"A more complicated tabulation, kept in The Digest's polling-room shows in more detail the trend of the vote. Thus, in California, according to this tabulation, Mr. La Follette draws his large vote chiefly from 12,862 former Democrats and 32,188 former Republicans, while 4,883 former Democrats are registered as voting for Coolidge, and 1,569 former Republicans are in the Democratic column."

"Turning to an Eastern State, New York, where La Follette has shown considerable strength, it appears that he draws 28,804 votes from former Republicans to 11,654 from former Democrats."

"In Iowa, he is credited with 11,137 former Republican votes, and 3,887 formerly Democratic. In Wisconsin, his home State, his present vote includes ballots from 20,306 former Republicans and 4,094 former Democrats; in Pennsylvania, 12,965 former Republicans and 3,791 former Democrats.

"In this connection it must be remembered that 1920 was a strongly Republican year, so that there is small indication in these figures that the Progressive candidate's strength is being contributed exclusively by one party, as several partisans have announced."

"It is also noteworthy that, in spite of Mr. La Follette's large vote, he has so far carried only the State of Wisconsin, with California added, granting that the present poll has a somewhat larger percentage of error in favor of the Republicans than was shown in the smaller poll of 1920."

"A Democratic paper finds in the registration of the previous affiliations of the poll voters, which is now given as 1,076,905 Republicans to 441,251 Democrats, a sign that no Democrat could possibly win in the poll."

"It may be said, also that no Democrat can win in the election unless a considerable number of the Republicans of 1920 change their politics."

"The citizenry of the country was divided, roughly, in 1920 between 16,000,000 Republicans and 9,000,000 Democratic voters, with only a small third-party vote, less than 1,000,000 for the Socialist candidate to complicate the issue. What shifts, then, are now being made from Republican to Democratic ranks, or from Democratic to Republican, that will show that the verdict of 1920 is to be reversed, or repeated?"

"A glance at the table comparing the 1920 and 1924 columns, shows a Republican increase in thirty-two of the States, while sixteen show a decreasing Republican vote. Ten States, on the other hand, show a Democratic increase over 1920, while a loss in the Democratic vote during the last four years is indicated in thirty-eight States. Some of these gains and losses are very large, some so small as to mean little."

"Among the more significant changes, there appear to have been Republican losses in Iowa, Illinois, Pennsylvania, California, Minnesota and Wisconsin. Republican gains are indicated in many of the States of the 'Solid South,' where such increases will, in all probability, have no effect on the election whatever, and also in Kansas, in New York, and in Michigan. Aside from ordinarily Democratic States, the Democrats appear to have increased their voting strength in West Virginia."

In presenting the views of Republican and Democratic editors on the general accuracy of their polls The Digest concludes with the comment of a Nebraska editor.

"No straw-vote," the editor states, "is actually satisfactory—to the losing side. However, The Digest vote in 1920 was amazingly accurate and, if we remember right, there was the same doubting on the part of the same editors."

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.—Adv.

MRS. LILLIAN COX GAULT BE-
COMES BRIDE OF J. PIERCE
WOLFE

St. Peter, Minn., Oct. 22.—Mrs. Lillian Cox Gault, former mayor of St. Peter, stepped out and got married and left St. Peter flat. The bridegroom is J. Pierce Wolfe, and they are going to live in Moorhead.

Mrs. Gault in 1921 and 1922 attained prominence by being Minnesota's first and only woman mayor. In 1922 she ran for Congress on the democratic ticket in the Third district. Minnesota democrats a few months ago were considering her as a possible successor to Mrs. Peter Olsen of Cloquet for a place on the democratic national committee.

Her outstanding achievements while mayor of St. Peter was to banish shimmying and cheek-to-cheek dancing from the town. She ran for Congress, she said, "to prove that women can find time to attend to other things without neglecting their homes." While mayor of St. Peter she did all her own housework.

The bride is the widow of Andrew K. Gault, civil engineer. The wedding today took place in Holy Communion Episcopal church here, Mr. and Mrs. Wolfe leaving immediately after the ceremony for Moorhead.

Note: Mrs. Cox is a relative of the late C. P. Cox, who at one time published the Brainerd Arena.

Long Sleeves and Tunic for Autumn

Radical Changes Meet With Disfavor—Fringe Trimming Favorite.

Genius and ingenuity have an oral similarity and nothing more. There is a vast difference between the poetic expression of a Shelley and the rhymes of the futurist, between the masterpiece of a Whistler and the vivid painting of the impressionist. And there is an equally broad chasm separating the creative designer from the sensationally inclined dressmaker, who will even espouse the grotesque in an endeavor to give mimicry something different. The test of true greatness in fashion, asserts a Paris writer in the New York Herald-Tribune, lies in the ability of the designer to induce a different mood rather than to create a new mode. Through the almost imperceptible raising of the waistline, the scarcely invisible change in the sleeve or waist, the Lanvins and the Chaneles are able to accomplish far more than all of the combined hack dressmakers who believe that a new style can only be achieved by compelling the mode to do an abrupt about-face. It is true enough that the essence of fashion is change, but it is equally certain that human nature normally offers the strongest resistance to any deviations from its accustomed fare. The task for the genius of the couturier is to reconcile these premises: to produce a vitally different effect, but to avoid radically different themes; to lead the mode into unaccustomed channels by the most accustomed methods.

Not Favored by Autumn Mode.

These are pertinent considerations in any analysis of the new clothes which will sound the costume keynote for fall and winter. A great deal of disappointment has been manifested because at the Paris openings and at the French shore resorts, where some of the fall clothes made their appearance, there is no evidence of a very radical change in the mode. The short skirt has become a little shorter, perhaps a little wider; the straight line maintains its inflexible rigidity. And the dilettante critics, lamenting bitterly over the evil days which have come to a mode which in their eyes knows no change, seize avidly upon the bizarre efforts of a few sensation-alists whose creations will never grace anything more than the momentary shoulders of the mannequin.

The mistake of these too casual observers is that they consider the means and not the end. It is true that the tools of the designer have not greatly changed, that plait and flounce, slenderness and simplicity, tunic and scarf, are just as potent factors in the new mode as they were in the old. But it is equally patent that the creative genius of the French couturier has brought a grace and dignity into its latest fashions which will have a deeper significance than any of the so-called revolutionary changes which have been sponsored by the lesser lights of the mode. The inauguration of a new style cycle is not necessarily indicated by these artistic changes but there has been unquestionably added an atmosphere of maturity which has been conspicuously lacking in recent seasons.

The logical representations of the new autumn tendencies retain the straight, short, slender simplicity of their predecessors in the mode, but they have added a graceful austerity which quickly distinguishes them from the garcon styles of last season. They are distinctive without being bizarre, different but not radical.

The long tunic is the most outstanding characteristic of these frocks, which also exploit lace, the flounce and vivid colorings. The basis for all is the simple silhouette, now more firmly ensconced than ever before.

Long Sleeves in the Mode.

A distinguishing feature of the late season is the long sleeve. While many of the dresses are still sleeveless, the really new note is the long, perfect-fitting sleeve adjusted to a small shaped armhole. The sleeve follows the outline of the upper arm, fitting quite snugly and sometimes even tightly.

From the elbow down the sleeve may vary in form. Often it is finished exactly like a shirtwaist, with a little cuff band; again it is straight in Chinese style and trimmed with a band of self material, this band in many instances being corded. But it has always a neat trim appearance.

Occasionally these tight-fitting sleeves have below the elbow one or two plaited flounces or decorations of hand-embroidered fringes, made of cordnet or filian, a smooth tubular cord which dressmakers are now using for sewn-in and embroidered fringes. Each little strand of the cord that forms the fringe it threaded through the fabric with a half-dozen or more stitches.

Callot featured this sewn-in fringe in the early spring, and it is one of the decorative themes that has become more pronounced as the season has advanced. Such an adornment immediately transforms the simplest looking dress into one of quite elaborate style. It in no way detracts from the slender line, as the threads, braids or cords used for this type of embroidery are of artificial silk and have both brilliancy and weight. The strands are sufficiently coarse to prevent tangling. It is quite apparent that simplicity will again be the dominant note. Everything that is slim and straight is expressed in the newest dresses. The silhouette may have a flounce, it may be plaited, it may be cut with a slight flare fullness, it may be straight around at the hem or there may be a tunic, but in all its varying forms fashion keeps to the very straight line.

Skirts Are Shorter.

Skirts are distinctly shorter than they were at the February showings. Just as the straight line has prevailed over the circular cut, so also has there been a definite movement in favor of the shorter skirt as against the longer one. Thus today the fashionable skirt is both short and retains its slender outline. The occasional wideness that is being introduced at the autumn openings does not materially disturb the straight silhouette.

The tunic form is in evidence everywhere, and so is the double volute with the upper flounce a bit fuller than the lower. Often the tunic is flowered, embroidered or printed in high colors. Lovely new frocks are being made in pastel plaids of various shades of one color, notably mauve and periwinkle blue. This plaid tunic is worn over a narrow foundation skirt of pure white, which may be either plaited or plain.

Once more the Paris modistes are staging a carefully prepared revolution against the perennial cloche which for the last few seasons has crowded every other chapeau out of the picture, and, from early indications, their newest efforts will be relatively successful. Which does not mean that the cloche is about to fade into a quick oblivion, but rather that it will now be compelled to share the spotlight with hats of different types.

The St. Cloud Country club, because of its social importance, has come to be one of the most significant fashion centers of the preautumn mode, and the millinery exploited at this resort definitely forecasts the styles which will eventually be adopted for fall and winter. At the recent polo matches many medium large hats were noted in sailor and cloche forms. These hats can only be called large in comparison with the extremely small ones that have been so much worn—really they are not excessively large. Numerous Suzanne Talbot models were in evidence, some of them made of ribbons, anticipating definitely the autumn season. Talbot is also having great success with her straw-embroidered tulle hats, the straw being applied in feather-like motifs that fall flat on the tulle. This is a medium large cloche with quite a pronounced droop to the brim, suggesting in a way the poke bonnet, as the brim is narrow at the back. Another of her hats which is much noted is a sailor shape, either medium or large, made entirely of folds or cords of velvet set together with openwork stitching, like venise point. This veining is so tightly made that it stands stiff and supports the space between the folds.

Automobile Minus Driver Creates Havoc in Wild Ride Around Town

Consternation reigned among the townsfolk of the small village of Westfield, New Jersey, when a racing car with the driver's seat empty rode at a terrific pace through this quiet town and endangered the lives of over a hundred people who were parading along the main street. Zig-zagging its course through the main thoroughfare, this "speed spook" seemed to be directed by an infernal hand, which apparently guided the car in its maddening course through this otherwise peaceful community. Sheriff West made pursuit in a high-powered machine, but the riderless car whizzed along at such breakneck speed that the sheriff was left far behind. It will be shown at the New Park last time tonight.

Remarkable Horse in Picture "Silver King," Fred Thompson's remarkable horse, appearing with him in "The Silent Stranger," coming to the Lyceum Theatre Thursday and Friday, is to be "starred" in a forthcoming F. Announcement is made of the appearance of the Aulger Bros. Stock Company all next week. Opening their engagement Monday night, Oct. 27, at the New Park Theatre, presenting "Saintly Hypocrites and Honest Sinners." The Aulger Bros. are especially noted for the fact that they always give the public good clean, wholesome entertainment.

"If I Ever Marry Again," Declares Pola Negri—

"It will be to an American." Miss Negri, who is due at the New Park on Thursday and Friday in the Paramount picture, "Lily of the Dust," came to this decision because, as she says herself, "American men are the only ones who really know how to treat a woman. In Europe, you know, it is the dramatic gesture that counts. A European gentleman feels perfectly free to treat you badly 364 days a year provided that on your birthday with a grand flourish he presents you with a gorgeous pearl necklace. The American man spreads his thoughtfulness all thru the year. He may not produce the annual pearl necklace, but every few days he brings his flowers and candy, which are not so valuable as to price but which represents much more."

HOW GREAT MEN MAKE LOVE

AS REVEALED BY THEIR LOVE LETTERS

DANIEL O'CONNELL AND MARY O'CONNELL

THE following beautiful expression of love was written by the great Irish patriot, orator and lawyer, Daniel O'Connell. To his sweetheart? No; to his wife, after twenty-three years of married life. And it is but one of many such epistles, written up to the end of the O'Connells' thirty-three years of happiness together.

"My own and only love, it was Kate (his daughter) that wrote the letter I got this morning, and I do most tenderly, tenderly love Kate. Yet, sweetest Mary, I could have wished to see one line also in the handwriting which gives me recollections of the happiest hours of my life and still blesses one with inexpressible sweetness and comfort when we, sweetheart, darling, are separate. All the romance of my life envelopes you and I am as romantic in my love this day as I was twenty-three years ago when you dropped your not unwilling hand into mine.

"Darling, will you smile at the love letters of your old husband? Oh, no, my Mary, my own Mary will remember that she has had the fond and faithful affections of my youth and that if years have rolled over they have given us no cause to respect or love each other less than we did in early life."

O'Connell's "own Mary" was his cousin, Mary O'Connell, whom he married when he was twenty-seven.

Wife Doing Good Work

"I have been bad off with stomach and liver trouble and bloating for many years. No doctors or medicine helped me. On the advice of my druggist, I bought a bottle of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and I don't want to miss a single dose. It has given me more benefit than all the medicine I have ever taken. I feel I am doing good to recommend it to others." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Johnson's Pharmacy and druggists everywhere.—Advt.

Many dairy farmers are finding that sudan grass makes a valuable crop for supplementing the regular pasture. It will furnish much grazing during the hot summer months, says J. A. Arey, dairy extension specialist for the North Carolina state college.

Common red mites, which infest hen houses and kill many chicks, can be done away with easily. First clean up all filth around the hen house and let plenty of sunshine into the building. Often the quarters become overcrowded. Where mites are found, paint the roosts and spray the walls with a solution of two parts of oil to one quart of stock dip. If lime-sulphur is on hand, a solution made with five gallons of lime-sulphur to 40 gallons of water will be effective.

BOY FALLS UNDER TRAIN; LOSES LEG

Kenneth Hodgson, Age 17, Missed Hold on Box Car He Attempted to "Catch"

Lad Taken to St. Joseph Hospital Where Injured Limb Was Amputated Above Knee

Kenneth Hodgson, aged seventeen years, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Hodgson, 416 1/2 South Sixth street, was thrown partially under a moving freight train, and injured so seriously that the amputation of his left leg was necessary.

The accident is said to have happened about four o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Young Hodgson, in company with two of his friends, Ray Beckley and Freddie Fredstrom, "caught" a west-bound freight train earlier in the afternoon, riding it to the Northern Pacific tie treating plant about two miles west of the city. According to the boys, they were going to the plant to seek employment.

When they were ready to return to Brainerd, there was another east-bound freight passing, and the boys decided to catch it and ride back. Beckley and Fredstrom state that they found the train moving too rapidly to catch, so tried to keep Hodgson from attempting to ride it, but he insisted and in swinging to the side of a box car was thrown beneath the train by its speed. His left foot was run over by the train, several cars passing over it, it is said, before his companions pulled him away.

Beckley and Fredstrom tried to carry the injured boy to town, but trainmen seeing that there had been trouble, stopped the freight and one of the brakemen tied a handkerchief above the injury to stop the loss of blood. An automobile that happened to be passing at the time, brought Hodgson to town, and to the St. Joseph hospital, where surgeons found it necessary to amputate the injured limb just above the knee.

The freight train was an extra, carrying about seventy cars of wheat from the West to the Duluth market. Conductor Toland was in charge of the train with Engineer Page at the throttle. Since the freight does not stop in Brainerd, no report was made by the crew until it arrived in Duluth.

Claimed Duluth Bus Struck Martin Ford From Rear, Accidentally Overturning It

Commandant and Mrs. R. Martin, of the local Salvation Army, are in a serious condition at the Cloquet hospital, as the result of an automobile collision which occurred on Tuesday afternoon, near Carlton.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin had motored to Superior, Wisconsin, and were returning when the bus from Duluth struck their Ford touring car from the rear, overturning it and pinning the two occupants beneath. Witnesses state that the bus driver, when he saw that a collision was unavoidable, turned into the ditch. He was two hours behind his schedule, and it is thought that he was trying to make up some of this time.

Passengers on the bus assisted in rescuing Mr. and Mrs. Martin from beneath their car, and assisted in transferring them to the hospital at Cloquet.

Commandant and Mrs. Martin came to Brainerd the latter part of August from Fairmont. He has been in the Salvation Army work for the past 32 years, and his wife for a period nearly as long. According to Salvation Army regulations, the officers may be pensioned at the age of sixty years provided they have been in the service for 25 years. Mr. Martin will be 60 years old in January, and he was planning to move to Superior when pensioned. The Martins have no children, and no near relatives in this section of the country. Local members of the Salvation Army are taking a deep interest in the recovery of their leaders, and it is hoped that their injuries are not of as serious a nature as was reported.

Little Falls seems to have had its share of week-end automobile accidents, the victims including a Brainerd lady, a Ft. Ripley citizen, and the editor of the Randall News.

The Brainerd lady was Mrs. Raleigh Wolleat, 624 Eighth Avenue, Northeast, who, according to the Little Falls Transcript, received a severe gash on her arm from a broken windshield when the car in which she, her husband and three children were riding, was struck by a car traveling in the opposite direction between Little Falls and Royalton.

Mr. Wolleat and the children, a girl eleven years old, a boy six years old, and a seven-months old baby, were unhurt. Mrs. Wolleat was holding the baby at the time of the accident. She was taken to St. Gabriel's hospital, at Little Falls, where it was necessary to take several stitches to close the wound. The party returned to Brainerd the following day.

Cars driven by Harry Hamm, Jr., and a Mr. Shipman of Ft. Ripley, collided at the intersection of First street and First avenue, Little Falls. The Hamm car suffered a bent fender and the front of the Shipman car was damaged. No one was injured.

N. F. Weston, of Randall, editor of the "News" in that village, had his leg broken below the knee when his automobile slid into the ditch near the bridge at Randall and turned turtle. Mr. Weston was blinded by lights from an approaching car, and drove too near the edge of the road, it is said. He managed to crawl from beneath the car and summoned help.

A fourth victim was Mrs. Richard I. Burton, who suffered a bruised and sprained shoulder when the automobile in which she and her husband were riding was struck by a car from Minneapolis. Both machines were damaged by the collision.

BOY FALLS UNDER TRAIN; LOSES LEG

Kenneth Hodgson, Age 17, Missed

Lad Taken to St. Joseph Hospital
Where Injured Limb Was Amputated Above Knee

Kenneth Hodgson, aged seventeen years, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Hodgson, 416½ South Sixth street, was thrown partially under a moving freight train, and injured so seriously that the amputation of his left leg was necessary.

The accident is said to have happened about four o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Young Hodgson, in company with two of his friends, Ray Beckley and Freddie Fredstrom, "caught" a west-bound freight train earlier in the afternoon, riding it to the Northern Pacific tie treating plant about two miles west of the city. According to the boys, they were going to the plant to seek employment.

When they were ready to return to Brainerd, there was another east-bound freight passing, and the boys decided to catch it and ride back. Beckley and Fredstrom state that they found the train moving too rapidly to catch, so tried to keep Hodgson from attempting to ride it, but he insisted and in swinging to the side of a box car was thrown beneath the train by its speed. His left foot was run over by the train, several cars passing over it, it is said, before his companions pulled him away.

Beckley and Fredstrom tried to carry the injured boy to town, but trainmen seeing that there had been trouble, stopped the freight and one of the brakemen tied a handkerchief above the injury to stop the loss of blood. An automobile that happened to be passing at the time, brought Hodgson to town, and to the St. Joseph hospital, where surgeons found it necessary to amputate the injured limb just above the knee.

The freight train was an extra, carrying about seventy cars of wheat from the West to the Duluth market. Conductor Toland was in charge of the train with Engineer Page at the throttle. Since the freight does not stop in Brainerd, no report was made by the crew until it arrived in Duluth.

BRAINERD'S ODDEST STORIES OF TODAY

The other day this "colyum" had a story on Carl Wright and Bert Orne concerning a duck hunting exploit. Today the "colyum" records a backfire on Jimmy Cleary. It is reported that Jimmy brought back a fat bluebill yesterday, trophy of his hunt, which he claimed was larger than the one he shot last year.

Last week Doc Amesbury, the Exalted Elks Ruler of Minneapolis lodge, said he was coming to Brainerd early Sunday morning to go duck hunting. Doc Coffin waited and waited, and Amesbury never showed up. Amesbury has a $600 silver mounted pump gun, a $300 fishing tackle outfit, a $4,000 town car, etc., etc., but he's short on ducks and fish. Brainerd Elks, anxious to impress the good doctor of Minneapolis, are willing to chase the ducks right up to the nozzle of his gun and have them commit suicide, anything so Doc takes back a bag to Minneapolis and can tell the club there about it.

This true story is told on a local hunter. Shooting ducks some 14 miles down river, he got four in midstream. With no boat available, he stripped, plunged in and retrieved the game. Arriving puffing and panting on shore, he examined his "ducks," and found them to be plain mudhens.

St. Paul, Oct. 22.—Posing as a milkman, Detective Jack Walsh early yesterday found and arrested a man who has successfully eluded police for nearly two years.

The man is L. D. Caye, 192 N. St. Albans st., wanted on two grand larceny charges growing out of mechanics' liens. The total amount of theft charged against him is about $1,300.

Early today Walsh posted himself near the place, and when the milkman came, took the bottle of milk for Caye's place, and went to the back door. Caye opened the door, but recognizing Walsh, slammed it again, and locked it, before the detective could grab him.

Walsh and Detective Grace ran around to the front, and caught Caye as he was running from the door there, they say. Caye was arraigned in municipal court today, and the case continued.

HARRIS, THE SERIES' HERO, SAYS FARRELL

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

Chicago, Oct. 22.—No world's series is complete without a hero, and as a rule it is possible to have opinion united fairly on the one player who most distinguished himself and whose individual efforts contributed most to the victory.

Returning from Washington, when the thrills of the greatest ball game ever played in a series were still chasing up and down the spine, the question was put to a crowded Pullman smoking room:

"Who was the big hero of the series?"

There were immediately responses nominating:

"Buck" Harris,
Walter Johnson,
Frank Frisch,
Roger Peckinpaugh,
Sam Rice,
Goose Goslin,
Tom Zachary.

Opinion was so divided it seemed that there was no big outstanding hero and it was suggested by those who were unable to agree that fate, in bounding two easy chances over the head of Freddy Lindstrom, the 18-year-old Giant third baseman, in the seventh and deciding game, had been the big hero for Washington.

As there is always a hero in every world's series there also is a goat and when the question was offered: "Who was the goat of the series?" a response was given almost in one voice:

"Miller."

Now that some time has elapsed since the series and the fever aroused by that wonderful battle of seven games between the Senators and the Giants has subsided, it is easier to probe for the hero with a clearer mind.

It is our opinion that the biggest hero of the series and one of the greatest of any series was young "Buck" Harris, the 28-year-old manager of a world's championship team.

Frank Frisch distinguished himself by great fielding at second base, but Harris handled his position just as well and made plays just as sensational as the Giant second baseman, although Harris does not put into his work the circus color of Frisch who runs out from under his cap, dives on his face and falls all over himself making recoveries.

Tom Zachary pitched and won two magnificent games, but Harris won two games by great hitting when a punch meant a victory.

Roger Peckinpaugh was brilliant in three games and he might have been the big star if he hadn't been hurt and missed so many games of the series.

Goose Goslin hit three home runs and played well and Sam Rice played the best outfield game of the series.

HOW GREAT MEN MAKE LOVE

AS REVEALED BY THEIR LOVE LETTERS

By JOSEPH KAYE

(© by Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

JOHN PAUL JONES AND "DELIA"

"COMMAND your mistress; give me this happiness—"

In such impassioned words the Comtesse de Nicolsen addressed the soldier of fortune, John Paul Jones. The comtesse was beautiful, the wife of a highly placed emissary to France from Holland, rich and surrounded by members of the most exclusive society, but it was John Paul Jones, the commander of a ragged makeshift for a navy, who ruled her heart.

John Paul Jones was one of the first American sea fighters. He was a remarkable man in that, aside from his adventurous instincts, which placed him on the sea at the age of twelve, he was educated, polished, possessed a charming manner, a good conversationalist and made fair verse when properly inspired by beauty. After Jones had served brilliantly in the new Continental navy he put himself in the service of Catherine of Russia. The intrigues of Catherine's court disgusted him and he went to Paris, his favorite city, and died there of dropsy.

Two women loved Jones and he is recorded as loving only one, Almee de Telison. But love letters found among his effects show to what extent the attachment between him and the Comtesse de Nicolsen, whom he called "Delia," after a sentimental poem of the time.

"Pardon me, oh, my beloved," wrote the comtesse, while tears stained the sheet, "if I am indiscreet, but I am tortured with fears on your account, fears which I felt at L'Orient, but which, observing your reticence on all such matters, I never dared to express. I am told that neither yourself nor your people are paid. In the name of the love which is consuming me command me if I can be of any service to you. I have diamonds and possessions of all sorts and could easily realize the amount. Command your mistress; give me this happiness—to me who would fly to your assistance. Twenty times while in your arms I pined to propose it but feared to displease you. . . .

"Dear and too adorable friend, what would I not give if you were free to remain in France! Oh, God! I am clinging to you, never again to separate from you. But no! I feel by the anguish of my soul which seems to whisper to me, that I shall never see you again. Heavens! Jones will forget me! He may cease to love me! No—his noble heart is incapable of such cruelty and I trust him as I would in heaven itself.

"Pardon, dear love, the confusion of my words. My distress absorbs all my thoughts. . . .

The time for parting came and Jones wrote the message that announced the day of his leaving. And his note was as tear-stained as her letters had been, as her reply shows:

"Your letter of Tuesday . . . tears my heart and augments my despair. With the grief of a desolate child I kissed the dear marks of your tears while those that fell from my eyes were the cruellest, the bitterest of my life."

The most fervid fires, however, burn themselves out in time; neither died from grief at the separation, and when the lovers met again it was on the basis of disinterested friendship.

GOPHERS MAY USE THE AERIAL ATTACK IN GAME

COACH SPAULDING WORKING MEN IN FORWARD PASS-ING GAME

STRIVES TO CORRECT MISTAKES
MADE IN RECENT WISCON-SIN GAME

(By Ed. L. Shave, Sports Editor of the St. Paul Daily News)

Coach Bill Spaulding of the Gophers will strive to have a forward passing attack that will bring results in the game Saturday with Iowa.

The Minnesota mentor was drilling the players hard last night in forward pass plays and it is very likely that the overhead attack will be launched against the Hawkeyes down at Iowa City.

The Gopher aerial attack was extremely weak against Wisconsin, it being helpless against the Badger backs, who broke up every attempt.

It looks as though Pete Guzy will be the quarterback for Saturday's game and, as Guzy is an accurate passer, chances are that the forward fling will be used at least enough to make it a threat.

Against Wisconsin with no threat, no man back to run or pass, the Badgers played a close-up formation, thus much more easily stopping Messrs. Carl Lidberg and Clarence Schutte.

With a man back who can carry the ball on end runs and pass, using the same formation, it tends to greatly strengthen the line-plunging attack.

Defense for passes must also be drilled upon this week. Iowa has a good pass game, as was shown against Lawrence last week.

The Iowa line was supposed to be weak in the early season, but Coach Ingwersen has developed a good forward ball, which is due to give the Gopher forwards plenty of trouble.

Iowa is a strong defensive team. The Cornhuskers had displayed a stubborn defense all season. They are especially tough on their home field.

This means that the Gophers' defense will need to be stronger than it was last week against Wisconsin.

Peplaw, the speed boy, who displayed some rare open field running against North Dakota, but was then hurt in practice, is back, ready for slight signal work.

Peplaw will not be ready for Iowa. It would be the height of folly to throw him into the game against the Hawkeyes, running the risk of an injury which would put him out for the rest of the season.

Peplaw has missed over two weeks of practice and needs much drilling to make him fit into the play.

Crude work in both back field and line is to be expected in the early part of a gridiron season, but later the teams which do not greatly improve in teamwork are out of luck.

The Gopher first team was given a long blackboard talk yesterday in which the many mistakes made Saturday were dwelt upon.

The Gopher second string players were hard at work in scrimmages with the freshmen, with Len Frank handling the scrubs' line and Bert Baston the ends.

Blaine McCusick and Sherman Finger were back of the first stringers. The scrubs showed up well, especially Bunker at tackle and Allison at guard.

Dan Duzen in the backfield displayed a wealth of drive and judgment from the manner in which he was galloping off the ends he may be given a chance Saturday at Iowa.

The Gopher squad will leave for Cedar Rapids on Thursday night on the Rock Island, leaving at 7 o'clock. The squad will be quartered at the Montrose hotel, and will remain there until Saturday morning, when they

SQUIRE EDGEATE --Look at the Old Flirts

BY LOUIS RICHARD

HARRIS, THE SERIES' HERO, SAYS FARRELL

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

Chicago, Oct. 22.—No world's series is complete without a hero, and as a rule it is possible to have opinion united fairly on the one player who most distinguished himself and whose individual efforts contributed most to the victory.

Returning from Washington, when the thrills of the greatest ball game ever played in a series were still chasing up and down the spine, the question was put to a crowded Pullman smoking room:

"Who was the big hero of the series?"

There were immediately responses nominating:

"Buck" Harris,
Walter Johnson,
Frank Frisch,
Roger Peckinpaugh,
Sam Rice,
Goose Goslin,
Tom Zachary.

Opinion was so divided it seemed that there was no big outstanding hero and it was suggested by those who were unable to agree that fate, in bounding two easy chances over the head of Freddy Lindstrom, the 18-year-old Giant third baseman, in the seventh and deciding game, had been the big hero for Washington.

As there is always a hero in every world's series there also is a goat and when the question was offered: "Who was the goat of the series?" a response was given almost in one voice:

"Miller."

Now that some time has elapsed since the series and the fever aroused by that wonderful battle of seven games between the Senators and the Giants has subsided, it is easier to probe for the hero with a clearer mind.

It is our opinion that the biggest hero of the series and one of the greatest of any series was young "Buck" Harris, the 28-year-old manager of a world's championship team.

Frank Frisch distinguished himself by great fielding at second base, but Harris handled his position just as well and made plays just as sensational as the Giant second baseman, although Harris does not put into his work the circus color of Frisch who runs out from under his cap, dives on his face and falls all over himself making recoveries.

Tom Zachary pitched and won two magnificent games, but Harris won two games by great hitting when a punch meant a victory.

Roger Peckinpaugh was brilliant in three games and he might have been the big star if he hadn't been hurt and missed so many games of the series.

Goose Goslin hit three home runs and played well and Sam Rice played the best outfield game of the series.

HOW GREAT MEN MAKE LOVE

AS REVEALED BY THEIR LOVE LETTERS

By JOSEPH KAYE

(© by Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

JOHN PAUL JONES AND "DELIA"

"COMMAND your mistress; give me this happiness—"

In such impassioned words the Comtesse de Nicolsen addressed the soldier of fortune, John Paul Jones. The comtesse was beautiful, the wife of a highly placed emissary to France from Holland, rich and surrounded by members of the most exclusive society, but it was John Paul Jones, the commander of a ragged makeshift for a navy, who ruled her heart.

John Paul Jones was one of the first American sea fighters. He was a remarkable man in that, aside from his adventurous instincts, which placed him on the sea at the age of twelve, he was educated, polished, possessed a charming manner, a good conversationalist and made fair verse when properly inspired by beauty. After Jones had served brilliantly in the new Continental navy he put himself in the service of Catherine of Russia. The intrigues of Catherine's court disgusted him and he went to Paris, his favorite city, and died there of dropsy.

Two women loved Jones and he is recorded as loving only one, Almee de Telison. But love letters found among his effects show to what extent the attachment between him and the Comtesse de Nicolsen, whom he called "Delia," after a sentimental poem of the time.

"Pardon me, oh, my beloved," wrote the comtesse, while tears stained the sheet, "if I am indiscreet, but I am tortured with fears on your account, fears which I felt at L'Orient, but which, observing your reticence on all such matters, I never dared to express. I am told that neither yourself nor your people are paid. In the name of the love which is consuming me command me if I can be of any service to you. I have diamonds and possessions of all sorts and could easily realize the amount. Command your mistress; give me this happiness—to me who would fly to your assistance. Twenty times while in your arms I pined to propose it but feared to displease you."

"Dear and too adorable friend, would I not give if you were free to remain in France! Oh, God! I am dying to regain you, never again to separate from you. But no! I feel by the anguish of my soul which seems to whisper to me, that I shall never see you again. Heavens! Jones will forget me! He may cease to love me! No—his noble heart is incapable of such cruelty and I trust him as I would in heaven itself.

"Pardon, dear love, the confusion of my words. My mistress absorbs all my thoughts."

The time for parting came and Jones wrote the message that announced the day of his leaving. And his note was as tear-stained as her letters had been, as her reply shows:

"Your letter of Tuesday . . . tears my heart and augments my despair. With the grief of a desolate child I kissed the dear marks of your tears while those that fell from my eyes were the cruellest, the bitterest of my life."

The most fervid fires, however, burn themselves out in time; neither died from grief at the separation, and when the lovers met again it was on the basis of disinterested friendship.
